A Pleasant Summer Resort.

As it is ours to know what is going on, and especially in Warren county, we called in on our return home to take in the situation at Crisp's Red Sulphur Springs, six miles west of McMinuville, and believing that experience is the best teacher, we speat Tuesday night at the new hotel at that place and found its gentlemanly proprietor, Mr. W. L. Lillard, in high spirits about the future of his laudable enterprise, and Dr. Ransom viewing with complacent satisfaction the results already achieved, and very active and hopeful with regard to the success of his well meant efforts to establish this as a pleasant and delightful summer resort. Though too early for the summering season, yet already quite a number of visitors had arrived and were esting by their presence. The sound of the hammer is brisk in making room for all who may apply. And we can assure our city friends who at some times and places have just grounds to be fastidious about hotel milk, butter dies and gents in great variety at and vegetables, that they will get what they call for under these heads fresh and pure, for Mr. Lillard has knocked out "the middle man" that the Grangdealing directly with the producers of Middle Tennessee S. S. Association.

Dr. De Witt, President of Middle Tennessee S. S. Association, desires it made known that the 4th meeting of this institution will be held at McMinnville, Tenn., July 5-7, 1881, and that all accredited delegates will be cordially entertained. The basis of representation will be one delegate for every four thousand people and one for every fraction of two thousand and more n counties having county associations, otherwise one delegate for every school of thirty or more members.

The programme is nearly ready for the printer, and bristles with points and power to use them.

All counties within the association are urgently requested to send delegates with assurances that they will be

The Book of the War.

The Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government, by Ex-President Jefferson Davis, is now being sold by subscription in Warren county by our active and energetic friend, Sam. F. Pennebaker, agent.

As predicted long before its appearance in public, this is emphatically the book of the war. Aside from Mr. Davis' intimate connection with the causes and conduct of the war, no man of his day was better qualified to perform this high and sacred duty to the past, present and future generations than he. A scholar by training and practice, a soldier by profession, a patriot by nature, a statesman by experience, and a writer without a rival in the field he has chosen, he could not have done otherwise in the course of human events than produce a book su-No departures-too warm to leave perior to all its competitors on that subject, And such is the result. Mr. Davis is not only a scholar in his sphere, a soldier, a patriot, a states-We live in the very midst of what man and writer, but he has acted the philosopher in delaying his work till the subsided. This fact, together with his peculiar and eminent qualifications for such a task designates him as the man was to present the causes, the conduct, and the result of the war, and vindiin the conflict or lost the prize.
